REPORT 250 PERISH WHEN LINER SINKS

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—Two hundred and fifty passengers were reported to have lost their lives today when the Russian liner Ogoza sank in the Black Sea during a hurricane. The tragedy took place between Nicolaievsk and Novorossiisk, according to the Vienna Neue Feile Presse which reported it in dispatches from Constantza via Bucharest. The Ogoza sank before most of the life-boats could be cleared, the dispatches said. Other vessels arrived at the scene after the Ogoza went down but were prevented from effecting many rescues by the high wind and heavy sea. Although the actual cause of the Ogoza's sinking was still unknown, it was believed the vessel sprang a leak during the storm. Fifty students were among those who perished.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Jan. 4—Col. Charles Lindbergh was given a second day's feting by official and private Hondurans today, all concerned endeavoring to crowd as much honor as possible into the short time the flying ambassador from the United States will remain here.

Chief on the list of functions in his honor today was a large reception given to Col. Lindbergh by the minister of foreign affairs. Diplomatic officials and prominent Hondurans were present.

Later on in the day the young flyer was to prepare for his flight over the presently turbulent forests of Nicaragua to Managua. He was expected to take off from here at dawn tomorrow.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Governor Alfred E. Smith's annual message to the 1928 legislature, which was read at the opening session today, was regarded at the capitol largely as presidential campaign document.

Being one of the outstanding contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination next year, the governor took occasion in his message to express his opinions on several important national problems, including prohibition, agriculture, conservation of natural resources, protection of civil liberties and aviation. In fact, the governor discussed, indirectly in some instances, pretty nearly everything but the tariff.

President Pendry appointed the following committee for the year:

Attendance: Emil Eichman, H. E. Prince, Dr. G. W. Kuhn; civic affairs: J. H. Whitmer, Elbert Babb, J. F. McLaughlin, Dr. Paul D. Espey; classification and membership: Adolph Moser, J. T. Charters, George I. Graham; education: the Rev. W. R. Shank, H. E. Rice, W. R. Torrence; finance: Marshall Wolf, John Daly, Harold Oldham; reception: Theophil White, S. O. Hale, S. W. Guyton;

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—Handwriting experts employed by William Randolph Hearst to render an opinion upon the authenticity of the Mexican documents recently printed in the Hearst newspapers have rendered an opinion that the documents were "spurious," the Senate investigating committee was informed today.

Wm. A. Ford, counsel for the publisher, presented the committee with the report of the experts at the outset of today's hearing. He said he had been instructed by Mr. Hearst to employ the experts as an aid to the committee in determining the authenticity of the documents.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 4—Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom of Indiana today filed suit to end the operations of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana.

Gillion brought an action in Marion County circuit court to revoke the certificate of admission of the Klan organization issued by the secretary of state, August 13, 1921.

The suit also asked an injunction be issued to restrain further activities of the Klan in Indiana.

Imperial Wizard Hiram W. Evans of the Klan and Joe M. Huffington, Indiana Klan grand dragon, were designated in the complaint as defendants.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—"Malicious spitework," was the indignat assertion today of Miss Ruth Elder, attractive young aviator, when asked to comment upon the sudden dragging up of an old charge of misconduct on her part with Shuford Jenkins, an evangelist, in Clayton, Ga., several years ago.

The charge is absolutely false, she declared over long distance telephone from Canton, O., where she is appearing in vaudeville.

"It was just an innocent automobile ride," she said. "Just because I am in the public eye somebody has determined to ruin me."

Information has just come out that Miss Elder was served with a BOSTON, Jan. 4.—Two battleships, five fleet destroyers and a mine layer were rushing out of this port to-day for southern waters.

The destroyers McFarland, Sturtevant, Overton, Putnam and J. K. Paulding sailed at midnight. The battleship Florida left earlier, and the battleship Utah and the mine layer Oglala had sailing orders to follow the destroyers.

While the navy yard announced that the little fleet was bound to Hampton Roads, Va., enroute to the winter war trials at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, scenes reminiscent of war times marked the departure of the battle craft in view of the turbulence in Nicaragua.

Shore leaves were suddenly cancelled. The telephone and telegraph and messengers were used in a quick roundup. Patrols went about the city. Men who remained aboard ship did a rush job of putting aboard fuel oil and supplies.

The destination of the mine layer Oglala was known to be Nicaragua. Her orders were to proceed to Hampton Roads to take aboard thirty-three officers and 433 men and steam to Nicaragua.

The destroyer Sturtevant recently returned from duty at the scene of the submarine S-4 disaster at Provincetown and the hunt for a fox.

THIRD ESCAPED PRISONER IS CAPTURED AFTER BEING SHOT

LEBANON, O., Jan. 4.—With the capture of Theodore Garrison by detectives from Hamilton last night, three of the five men who escaped from a break from the county jail here last Sunday night were again in custody today.

Hamilton officers were "tipped" that two of the fugitives were hiding in a hut at Coke Otto, near there. On approaching the place the escaped prisoners began shooting at the detectives with a pistol. Detective Al Miller returned the fire, shooting Garrison twice, once in the arm and once in the face. The other man, believed to have been Joseph Carr, another of the fugitives, escaped. Garrison was taken to a hospital in Hamilton where it is reported that his wounds are not serious.

Bradley Griffin, 18, was captured when he appeared at his home in Franklin soon after the jail break. He was almost frozen. Charles Stibbs was re-caught at his home near Lebanon. Carr and Henry Johnson, a negro, are still at large.

Willys Cuts Prices To Compete In Lower
Price Field

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Declaring that manufacturing and material costs at the Willys-Overland plants were as low as any in the industry, and that factory service costs on the Whippet during the nineteen months it has been in production were the lowest ever known on any car in the history of Willys-Overland production, John N. Willys, president, announced a perfect car even whistled in his steel cage:

"Bye, Bye, Pretty Baby."

As Hickman's thin lips formed the refrain, his jailers recalled that this was the song record found on a run-down phonograph in the Bellevue Arms Apartment where Hickman confessed he held his little captive and put her to death.

The new low prices place the Whippet on a directly competitive basis with the lowest priced cars in the field.

The four-door sedan was cut $140, and the new list price on this model, which will be a leader in the present Whippet line, is $585.

The two-door sedan is priced at $535, which is a reduction of $99 over the former price. The coupe is priced at $535, which represents a cut of $99, and the roadster and touring models are now $525 and $455, respectively, the cuts being

$170 on the roadster and $170 on the touring car.

The convertible coupe, on which the present list price is lower than on the corresponding Ford model is now priced at $545, which represents a reduction of $200 from the previous price.

This is the first time that any manufacturer has been in the field with a car selling at lower prices than Ford for an equivalent model.

Solons Should Have Ten Months For Work
Ahead

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—Congress came back to work today in a belligerent frame of mind for the five months of legislating, investigating and intensive political fighting that stretches ahead to the national conventions.

Enough fights and investigations, actual and potential, are on the calendar to keep congress busily engaged for ten months let alone five. There are half a dozen moves to investigate the navy alone, growing out of the S-4 submarine disaster, and the reverses suffered by the marines in their attempt to pacify Nicaragua, for which there is a disposition to hold the navy administration, not the marines, responsible.

The legislative outlook, as Congress reassembled for the straight run down the stretch into the political conventions, is not encouraging. The difficulty lies, as usual, with the senate, and it is there the most of the savage partisan fighting will take place. It is there, too, that most of the presidential politics will be played between now and next June when the conventions force adjournment.

Ford declared the "financial crowd" picks the man for president and added that they should do so "because they have the knowledge and are in position to select the best man."

"The financial crowd has picked Hoover and he is the man for the place."

Ford thinks the presidential election will have no effect on business conditions.

Ford concluded, and set Hickman's trial for January 25.

While Hickman won a temporary victory in obtaining a delay in his trial, he forfeited the possibility of pleading tender age to escape the hangman's noose, for in Walsh's affidavit it is set forth the fact that although Hickman is under 21, his age would permit hanging: "To wit, the age of 19 years."

Hickman's age had been something in dispute after his mother, Mrs. Eva Hickman of Kansas City, testified here some six months ago that her son was then only 17 in obtaining Hickman's parole on forged charges.

However, since his capture and arrest for the kidnaping and murder of Marion Parker, Hickman has insisted that he is 19 years old.

MADHOUSE DAYS OVER

Presidential elections used to be accompanied by business disturbances that sometimes reached the catastrophe stage. Business faced the presidential year with the trepidation of a man on his way to a pagan holiday; not knowing if he was to be stabbed, burned, hanged or eaten.

This year, there is small likelihood of financial or social upheaval.

The people are no longer unadvised about fundamental business and economic principles. They will demand that the next president be a safe, dependable man who can carry on a program of businesslike economy in government and who will keep government a controllable, dependable machine instead of a hare-brained political madhouse, always ready to sacrifice national prosperity for political expediency.

LINDY WINS NEW FRIENDS FOR U. S.

The expressions of the Mexican congress and the governments of the Central American countries in recognition of the exploit of Colonel Lindbergh, are wonderful indeed. Whereas for many years, Mexicans have been exploding with unfriendly sentiment, all at once the presence of this hero aviator awakens warm ardor of admiration.

This experience should suggest that there are more effective ways to reach favorable agreements with people than carrying on controversies with them. If our relations with them consist simply of demands and arguments and claims, they are as obstinate as mules. If we try acts of friendship, they are likely to respond in the same spirit.

Some action which shows sentiment and friendship may win the regard of people more than the arguments of diplomats and business men. In ordinary intercourse some people can win by smiles and magnetism the affection that would never come by oratory. It works that way in these airplane flights.

Somehow a country seems nearer and more closely related when someone from that country drops out of the sky at your back door. Colonel Lindbergh gives a superb demonstration of what American manhood is at its best, and wherever he goes he will lead people to like our country better.

MILLIONS QUITTING FARMS

Two million farmers have given up the calling of agriculture, during the past six years, according to a speaker before the American Farm Bureau federation at its recent meeting. The American people expected great benefits a few years ago from the "Back to the Land" movement, so it seems a very unfortunate thing that so many of these country people have quite the farms.

Different authorities offer different remedies to meet this situation. But all will agree on this point, that better education for forming would help people make good as farmers.

Farming today is a business proposition, calling for technical science and efficiency methods. If the country wants to keep a large proportion of its people in the wholesome work of farming, where they bring up good families under the most healthful conditions, it will have to provide agricultural schools more generously.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

BOBBED

It is estimated that 3,400 tons of hair have been cut off women's heads since the bobbed hair fad began. It is further estimated that there are 14,000,000 bobbed heads in the United States. And think of all the conversation and argument and debate that have been wasted on what is after all a trivial matter.

Analyze modern thought and the subjects which most engage men's minds and we are forced to the sad conclusion that most of our time is given to odds and ends of no great significance.

THE BEAUTY CHASE

Beauty crowds old age right up to the edge of the grave. American women, according to Gertrude Lane, editor of the Woman's Home Companion, spend a billion eight hundred million a year in the pursuit of beauty. That amount of money is equivalent to the entire debt which the ten smaller nations of Europe owe the United States. Well, most women get very good results in this chase for beauty, and the money invested has much to do with making a happier and more livable world.

LITTLE THINKING AHEAD

A Chicago preacher is crusading for a new law which will make divorce much more difficult to get. He says this will curb hasty and thoughtless marriages. He shows little knowledge of the habits of the average human. Men and women in the mood for marriage do not think things through. They do not think far ahead. They act on impulse. They always have and always will. The ease or difficulty of divorce does not interest two people in love. The world is not yet rational to any large degree. We are still mostly concerned, in a totally irrational manner, in getting what we want when we want it.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Speaking of "thinking things through," the argument is urged that if capital punishment were abolished murder would be increased. The fact is that in states which have no capital punishment crime is not more prevalent than elsewhere. Men and women about to commit crime do not think things through. They are not in the mood for weighing facts. They are swayed by powerful impulses. Later, in jail, they have much time for thought. The fact that capital punishment may or may not be at the end of the road probably receives much less thought than we commonly suppose.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—It would be interesting, if you had the time, to track down the origins of a story which has been going the round the past year. For all I know, it may have its beginnings in literature, but as it is passed around, it assumes the naive guise of a neighborhood legend, beginning thus: "We knew a woman in Dallas, years ago." To proceed, it concerns a lady philanthropist who was presented with a valuable ring, and who, finding the trouble difficult to explain to her husband, pawned it and pretended to have found the pawn ticket. With palpitating heart, sure of the success of her scheme, she awaited her spouse's homecoming with the jewel. He came boldly in and handed her a cheap dummy which might have been bought at the ten-cent store, merrily chaffing her at the fall of her hopes. Then, later, the discomfited lady sees the ring on the hand of her husband's blondine secretary, and realizes that she is not the only cheater in the family. One of my editor friends tells me the piece has turned up in three separate guises, in fiction form, during the past year. And I have heard it myself, by word of mouth, cited as a matter of personal knowledge, from people in East Ely, Nevada, Houston, Texas, and Larchmont, New York. Occasionally the object varies. Sometimes the gift is a fur coat, instead of a ring. But always the narrator begins, with wide eyes breathlessness, "The funniest thing happened to a woman I know."

The girls in the tall mob-caps at certain tea shops have faces that match their ensembles, long skirted frocks of hunter's green. They all look fresh from the old soil. They have English beefsteak pie at these restaurants, but the crust is the best part of it. I can't stand the beefsteak much. I should like sometime to have an old-fashioned steak and kidney pie, of the American variety. It's too homely a dish for the finical, but I think there's nothing better, if it's properly made. I always feel a strong surge of sympathy for the big, strong chauffeur fellows who play nursesmaid to Pekingeses outside department stores, while their mistresses dawdle indoors from counter to counter. . . . But the thing that really gets all the nice six-footers who sell stockings and silk purses in Madison Avenue shops? They're too sweet for anything.

Yesterday a taxi-driver said to me: "I don't know why people take cabs in this (the Fifth avenue) traffic. They could get where they're going faster if they walked." Me," he announced dismally, "I'm going to buy me a shack in the country and get out of this town or I'll be in the funny house. I can't stand it much longer."

Sidelight on the manner in which the tabloids get their front page pictures: A photograph of Edward (Daddy) Browning appeared in the Mirror not long ago, showing Mons. Browning holding aloft in each hand a puny reporter. This scene was supposed to illustrate the strength the old gent had gained by eating raw food. My scout tells me that in reality men were hidden behind the suspended reporters, helping to bear the weight of them, and that Mr. Browning's part in the performance was merely that of a smiling conspirator.

BEAUTY OF FORM AND SYMMETRY

Yesterday I gave you a definition of beauty, and outlined for you the five principle kinds. They were, as you may recall: Proportional, or beauty of form and symmetry; grace, connoting flowing movement; wild or luxuriant, suggesting the unusual, exotic type of woman; pretty or handsome, soft skin, pleasant color of eyes, complexion, hair; and beauty that conforms to fashion or the ruling style—the chic, smart woman, perfectly groomed in every detail.

I am going to take up each of these kinds of beauty in turn, and I shall attempt to show you their relative value and the relationship between them. Today we are discussing the proportional type or beauty of form and symmetry. I have purposely considered form first, because it is of basic importance. You who have seen fine sculpture know the aesthetic thrill that may be had from form alone. For sculpture does not depend upon any of the other kinds of beauty. The Venus de Milo, for instance, is discolored, corroded by age and exposure, yet the lines are so perfect and so inspiring that people go from all over the world to see her.

However, that natural perfection of line is so rare in women, that they must supplement it with every other kind of beauty. Hardly any woman possesses a perfect figure, and if she is so blessed, she must use eternal vigilance and self-denial to keep it through her mature years. Fortunately, a great deal can be done to correct the imperfections of form which age, bad habit of posture, overeating, etc., have caused in us.

For people who are suffering from anemia, doctors recommend eating liver. Few people know how to cook liver in many ways. I confess that liver and bacon is practically all the way I knew about. So, in case there are other housewives in the same boat, I will include several ways of cooking it in today's recipes, and even if the members of your family are not suffering from any form of this malady—and I certainly hope they are not—you can serve it in a new way once in a while.

MADHOUSE DAYS OVER

Presidential elections used to be accompanied by business disturbances that sometimes reached the catastrophe stage. Business faced the presidential year with the trepidation of a man on his way to a pagan holiday; not knowing if he was to be stabbed, burned, hanged or eaten.

This year, there is small likelihood of financial or social upheaval.

The people are no longer unadvised about fundamental business and economic principles. They will demand that the next president be a safe, dependable man who can carry on a program of businesslike economy in government and who will keep government a controllable, dependable machine instead of a hare-brained political madhouse, always ready to sacrifice national prosperity for political expediency.

LINDY WINS NEW FRIENDS FOR U. S.

The expressions of the Mexican congress and the governments of the Central American countries in recognition of the exploit of Colonel Lindbergh, are wonderful indeed. Whereas for many years, Mexicans have been exploding with unfriendly sentiment, all at once the presence of this hero aviator awakens warm ardor of admiration.

This experience should suggest that there are more effective ways to reach favorable agreements with people than carrying on controversies with them. If our relations with them consist simply of demands and arguments and claims, they are as obstinate as mules. If we try acts of friendship, they are likely to respond in the same spirit.

Some action which shows sentiment and friendship may win the regard of people more than the arguments of diplomats and business men. In ordinary intercourse some people can win by smiles and magnetism the affection that would never come by oratory. It works that way in these airplane flights.

Somehow a country seems nearer and more closely related when someone from that country drops out of the sky at your back door. Colonel Lindbergh gives a superb demonstration of what American manhood is at its best, and wherever he goes he will lead people to like our country better.

MILLIONS QUITTING FARMS

Two million farmers have given up the calling of agriculture, during the past six years, according to a speaker before the American Farm Bureau federation at its recent meeting. The American people expected great benefits a few years ago from the "Back to the Land" movement, so it seems a very unfortunate thing that so many of these country people have quite the farms.

Different authorities offer different remedies to meet this situation. But all will agree on this point, that better education for farming would help people make good as farmers.

Farming today is a business proposition, calling for technical science and efficiency methods. If the country wants to keep a large proportion of its people in the wholesome work of farming, where they bring up good families under the most healthful conditions, it will have to provide agricultural schools more generously.

BOBBED

It is estimated that 3,400 tons of hair have been cut off women's heads since the bobbed hair fad began. It is further estimated that there are 14,000,000 bobbed heads in the United States. And think of all the conversation and argument and debate that have been wasted on what is after all a trivial matter.

Analyze modern thought and the subjects which most engage men's minds and we are forced to the sad conclusion that most of our time is given to odds and ends of no great significance.

THE BEAUTY CHASE

Beauty crowds old age right up to the edge of the grave. American women, according to Gertrude Lane, editor of the Woman's Home Companion, spend a billion eight hundred million a year in the pursuit of beauty. That amount of money is equivalent to the entire debt which the ten smaller nations of Europe owe the United States. Well most women get very good results in this chase for beauty, and the money invested has much to do with making a happier and more livable world.

LITTLE THINKING AHEAD

A Chicago preacher is crusading for a new law which will make divorce much more difficult to get. He says this will curb hasty and thoughtless marriages. He shows little knowledge of the habits of the average human. Men and women in the mood for marriage do not think things through. They do not think far ahead. They act on impulse. They always have and always will. The ease or difficulty of divorce does not interest two people in love. The world is not yet rational to any large degree. We are still mostly concerned, in a totally irrational manner, in getting what we want when we want it.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Speaking of "thinking things through," the argument is urged that if capital punishment were abolished murder would be increased. The fact is that in states which have no capital punishment crime is not more prevalent than elsewhere. Men and women about to commit crime do not think things through. They are not in the mood for weighing facts. They are swayed by powerful impulses. Later, in jail, they have much time for thought. The fact that capital punishment may or may not be at the end of the road probably receives much less thought than we commonly suppose.

Skittish Pictures in Churches

We had a rude shock today in the town of Stratford—Stratford-on-Avon—the town that William Shakespeare helped the local chamber of commerce to make famous.

The house in which the bard was born, or rather the room in which he is supposed to have been born aroused my curiosity because I couldn't understand why his mother would have picked that bed chamber when more comfortable rooms were available in the same house.

Possibly his father, little suspecting what an important birth it was, may have yawned and said: "Let's have the birth up there where it won't clutter up the rest of the house."

But what I started to tell about was a thing that we almost missed. After looking about the town with a glimpse inside the little church where Shakespeare is buried, we went to the nearest railway station and were waiting for a train back to London, when an old man with funny side-whiskers, chanced to fall into conversation with us.

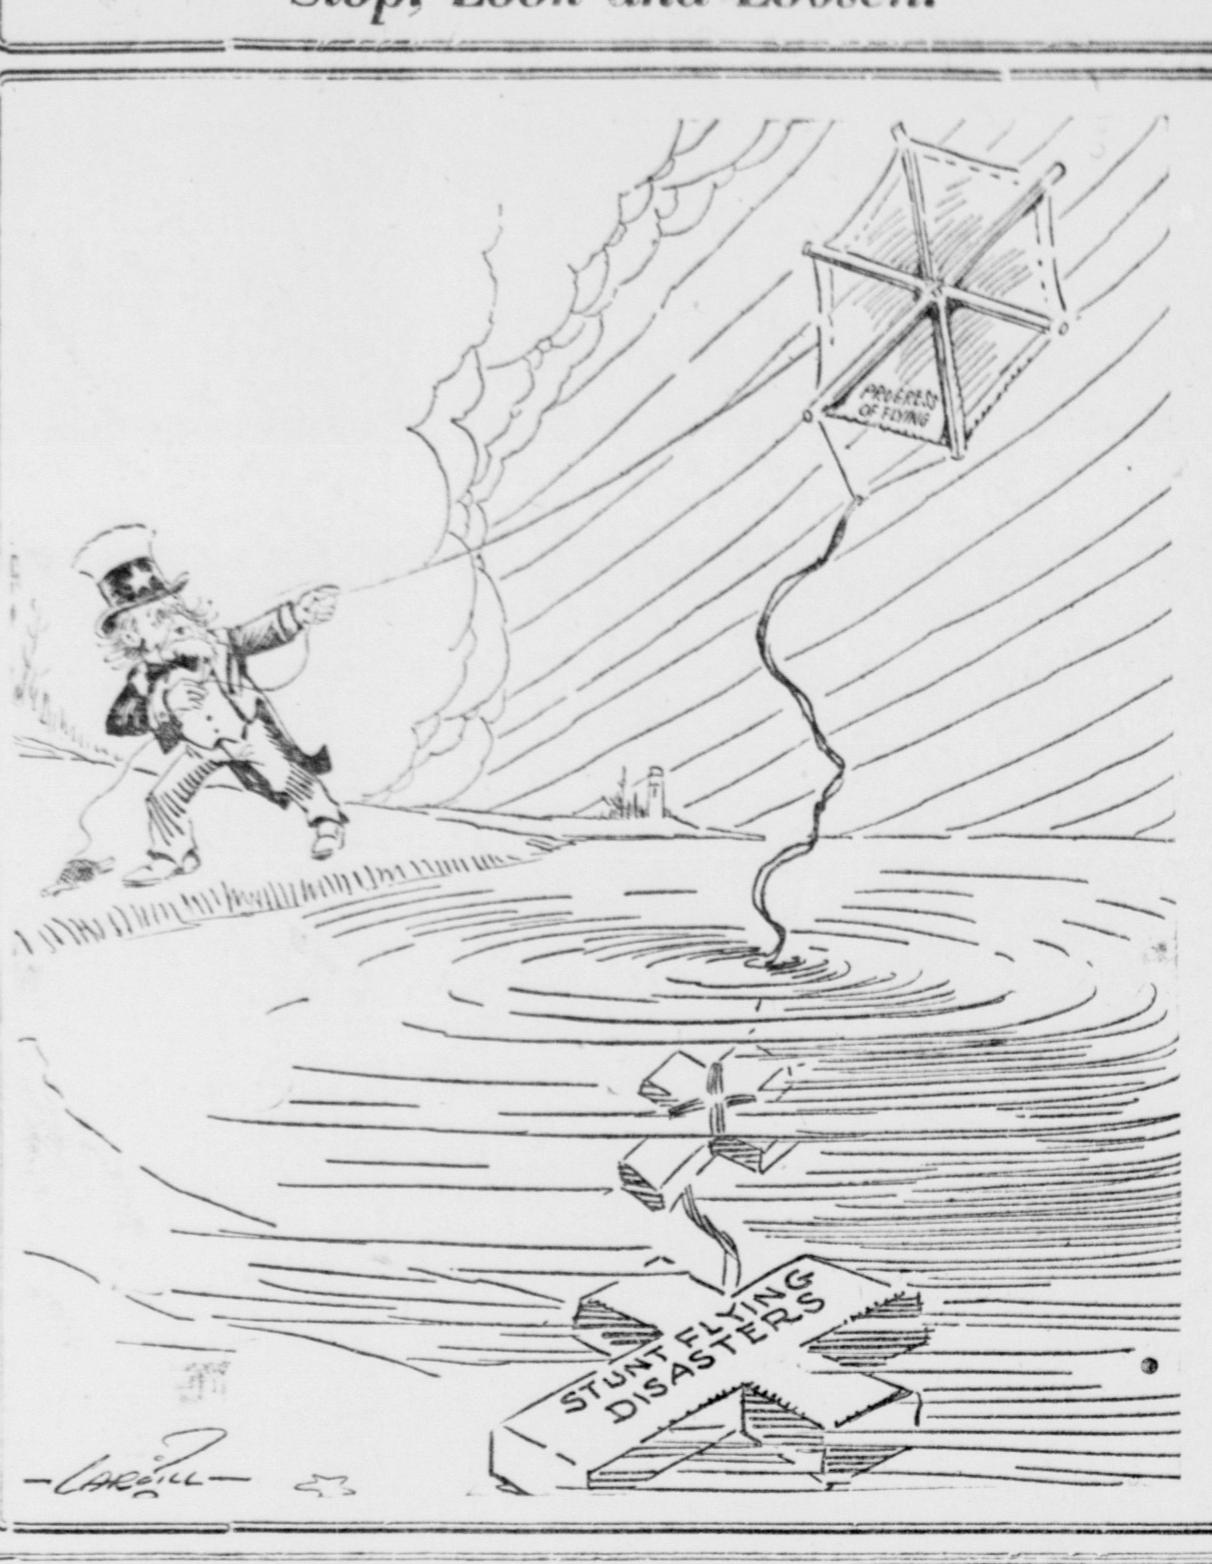

"Did you happen to see the pictures underneath the seats in the choir loft of the church?" he asked.

We confessed that it had never occurred to us to look for pictures there. What about them?

A sly look came into his eyes, and though no one else was near, he let his voice drop to a whisper as he told us about these pictures made by ancient wood carvers. It seems that it was common practice in the Middle Ages for wood carvers who did work in churches to have their little joke and execute something a bit skittish where it would be seen only by those who knew where to look. Their favorite place was the under side of the choir seats, which, like theater seats, may often be raised.

I hastened in to the ticket window and learned that we could

BEAUTY OF FORM AND SYMMETRY

Yesterday I gave you a definition of beauty, and outlined for you the five principle kinds. They were, as you may recall: Proportional, or beauty of form and symmetry; grace, connoting flowing movement; wild or luxuriant, suggesting the unusual, exotic type of woman; pretty or handsome, firm, soft skin, pleasant color of eyes, complexion, hair, and beauty that conforms to fashion or the ruling style—the chic, smart woman, perfectly groomed in every detail.

I am going to take up each of these kinds of beauty in turn, and I shall attempt to show you their relative value and the relationship between them. Today we are discussing the proportional type of beauty of form and symmetry. I have purposefully considered form first, because it is of basic importance.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea

By JEAN MACON

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussel mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product for only 75 cents, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied.

Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what do lights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, before application, it causes beautifully darkening the hair after two applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Concerning the charge of transporting the same liquor, the court pointed out that the question is raised as to whether transportation and possession may be charged with the same subject matter, where they must depend upon the same proof. This question was left undecided by the appeals court.

Neither Mrs. J. C. McCoy nor Miss Gladys McCoy testified as to the transportation of the liquor, it was pointed out. The only evidence on that subject is the testimony of J. J. Weaver who was pursuing the car but allowed the auto to get out of his sight, the court ruled.

Meanwhile, the liquor, if it was in the car, had been disposed of and the appeals court, therefore, is unable to find evidence that she is guilty of unlawful transportation of liquor, according to the ruling.

Attorney F. L. Johnson represented the plaintiff in error with Prosecutor J. C. Marshall acting for the state.

Mr. and Mrs. James Swaby entertained for Christmas, Mrs. Swaby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. King, of Springfield; her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Gelsenster, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Swaby and children, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stewart and children and Mr. Chester Swaby.

YOUTH AWARDED FULL $10,000 VERDICT IN DAMAGE ACTION

Verdict for $10,000 compensatory sum of Nellie Moore as a party to damages, the full amount sought, in the suit without prejudice to further action, with the result the damage verdict is entirely against Wentz.

Wentz, it was charged, owned the Auburn auto driven by the girl who was alleged to have been acting as agent and on business for him at the time of the accident.

Minister, in Xenia on a visit with his cousin, Donald Weaver, was standing on the Springfield Pike when the defendant's auto approached at a speed of forty or forty-five miles an hour, the petition declared.

It was testified that the youth was standing on the right side of the road looking north toward Springfield and was entirely off the paved surface when the auto was driven deliberately off the highway directly toward him.

The youth declared he started to run east but was overtaken by the machine and struck on the right leg. He was tossed six or more feet in the air, alighting on the auto between the right fender and hood and carried in that position about 100 feet before being bumped off into a ditch.

Meanwhile, the auto, without stopping, but instead picking up speed, continued on its way east along the Swisher Road, into which the driver had turned, it was charged.

Minister claimed that his right leg, practically from the hip to the ankle, was bruised and swollen, requiring medical attention and forcing him to walk on crutches. He was rendered unconscious and suffered severe nervous shock, he declared.

There is also a possibility the leg injury may be permanent, it was testified. The youth is a student at the University of Illinois, preparing to become a director of athletics, and because of the leg injury may be forced to abandon further plans to follow this profession, it was said. For the last three or four months his preparation for this work has been confined to study books.

Three witnesses were introduced at the trial by the plaintiff. Dr. A. C. Messenger testified as to the boy's condition and medical attention given. Minister related circumstances of the accident while Donald Weaver, who witnessed the accident and pursued the car on his motorcycle, also testified. The defense offered no witnesses. Wentz did not appear in court.

At an aftermath of the accident, Nellie Moore was arrested at a rooming house in Dayton and convicted in Probate Court on charges of reckless driving, possession and transportation of liquor.

The Court of Appeals upheld the first two convictions but reversed the conviction relating to alleged transportation of liquor and remanded the case for a new trial.

Leonard retired three years ago. He will not be ready to resume ring activities until the outdoor season arrives.

BOWLING

For the second time in two days the Recreation League record for high three-game total has been broken.

The Greene County Lumber Company leaders of the league, which formerly held the record until it was bettered by the Fords Monday night, established a new mark of 2,959 while winning three straight games from the Studebaker Commanders Tuesday night.

This total exceeds the Fords' record of 2,946 by thirteen pins. Winners rolled games of 943, 1,034 and 932. Blackburn rolled sequentially with a 647 series followed by Brickel with 610. Knisley led the losers with 557.

Studebakers also bowled in good form. The clean sweep enabled the lumber company quinted to stretch its lead over the Fords to two full games. Box score:

IF RHEUMATIC EAT NO SWEETS

Says glass of salts help to overcome Rheumatism acid.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

Verdict for $10,000 compensatory sum of Nellie Moore as a party to damages, the full amount sought, in the suit without prejudice to further action, with the result the damage verdict is entirely against Wentz.

Wentz, it was charged, owned the Auburn auto driven by the girl who was alleged to have been acting as agent and on business for him at the time of the accident.

Minister, in Xenta on a visit with his cousin, Donald Weaver, was standing on the Springfield Pike when the defendant's auto approached at a speed of forty or forty-five miles an hour, the petition declared.

It was testified that the youth was standing on the right side of the road looking north toward Springfield and was entirely off the paved surface when the auto was driven deliberately off the highway directly toward him.

The youth declared he started to run east but was overtaken by the machine and struck on the right leg. He was tossed six or more feet in the air, alighting on the auto between the right fender and hood and carried in that position about 100 feet before being bumped off into a ditch.

Meanwhile, the auto, without stopping, but instead picking up speed, continued on its way east along the Swisher Road, into which the driver had turned, it was charged.

Minister claimed that his right leg, practically from the hip to the ankle, was bruised and swollen, requiring medical attention and forcing him to walk on crutches. He was rendered unconscious and suffered severe nervous shock, he declared.

There is also a possibility the leg injury may be permanent. It was testified. The youth is a student at the University of Illinois, preparing to become a director of athletics, and because of the leg injury may be forced to abandon further plans to follow this profession, it was said. For the last three or four months his preparation for this work has been confined to study books.

Three witnesses were introduced at the trial by the plaintiff. Dr. A. C. Messenger testified as to the boy's condition and medical attention given. Minister related circumstances of the accident while Donald Weaver, who witnessed the accident and pursued the car on his motorcycle, also testified. The defense offered no witnesses. Wentz did not appear in court.

As an aftermath of the accident, Nellie Moore was arrested at a rooming house in Dayton and convicted in Probate Court on charges of reckless driving, possession and transportation of liquor.

The Court of Appeals upheld the first two convictions but reversed the conviction relating to alleged transporting of liquor and remanded the case for a new trial.

This total exceeds the Fords' record of 2,946 by thirteen pins. Winners rolled games of 943, 1,034 and 982. Blackburn rolled sensational with a 647 series followed by Brickell with 610. Knistey led the losers with 557.

Studebakers also bowed in good form. The clean sweep enabled the lumber company quintet to stretch its lead over the Fords to two full games. Box score:

Says glass of salts help to overcome Rheumatism acid.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with Lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

An autopsy to determine the cause of the death of Miss Emily Stevens, 46, prominent for many years on the American stage was held in New York Tuesday. Miss Stevens died Monday after she sank into a coma after taking an overdose of sedative.

She had suffered for years with play revivals.

Specialize and succeed is a proved maxim in the movies... Clara Bow specialized in flapper parts... W. C. Fields specialized in pantomime juggling as a start to his future success... Adolphe Menjou specialized in the saucy character... Bebe Daniels specialized in versatility.

neighborhood of the Staleys to say something more about the piston ring. But he did not. He just went on pouring out the champagne into the thin, shallow glasses carefully, never spilling a drop.

If there is a better ring on the market than his, it won't be successful now, close the big car was that a howling success with it," she said slowly, "especially if you put a lot of money into the other one."

Staley shrugged his shoulders under his perfectly fitting coat. His mouth tilted the corners of his lips. His blonde toothbrush mustache never knew.

Even at the time she did not realize how close the big car was that the accident, somehow, just turned into a stopper road from a side street about two blocks from Staley's street.

One moment its headlights seemed to be far away, and the next moment they were close to her like giant eyes, blinding her as the car behind them crashed into Jack's roadster.

The next morning she awoke aching in every bone.

Her head felt as big as the dining room itself, as she sat at the breakfast table, trying to eat and to answer all of her mother's questions.

"You're going to be killed, sure as fate, if you drive around with that wild Jack Eastman," said Mrs. Lexington. "He's in the hospital right now, but he'll forget all about this when he's out in a few days."

The front door bell rang and she went down the hall to answer it. In a moment she came back, and she was beaming.

Jack was bent over the steering wheel and his head rested on it. He had not made a sound.

That was odd, she thought, so interested in him that she did not notice the crowd that was collecting all around them.

"Sue—Jack's badly hurt," she said, and tried to make him speak. But he didn't, and Sue did not seem to realize that he was badly injured. She kept crying and laughing and wiping her eyes.

Lily turned to look out of the car and then she saw how many machines had appeared as if by magic. The road was fast filling with people, and a little group of men were standing around the other car—or what was left of it.

"Hurt, ladies," asked a man's voice, and the handle of the door beside Lily was opened by a short, stocky man whose eyeglasses glinted in the light from the arch lamp above them.

"We aren't, but the man with us—it," Lily answered shakily, wondering why she did not cry. "I think we'd better have a doctor—or rush him to a hospital."

Sue seemed to wake out of her daze at that "Who?—Jack?" she asked, looking down at him as if she saw the first time that something was very wrong with him. Then she began to whimper, bending down close to see him and touching him with her hands.

The man vanished, promising to call an ambulance right away. Then, in about two minutes, he came rushing back and offered himself and his own car to take Jack to the nearest hospital.

With the help of some other men who had stopped their cars to see the wreck, he got poor Jack into his own automobile. Sue, at the last moment, climbed in after them and Lily was left alone with the car.

An ambulance came clanging up the road and the man who had been driving the other car was picked up from the ground and taken away in it. The crowd began to disperse.

"What will I do with this machine?" Lily called out to the man who passed close to her on his way to a brougham across the way.

He came across the parkroad to her. In the darkness she could not see his face, but something about him seemed to be curiously familiar.

"Better call the automobile club," he answered. "Or I will send a tow car up for it if you like. I'm in the garage business."

Roy Jefferson! The minute he spoke Lily knew who he was, and she was sure that he must recognize her, too.

"I'll call the automobile club, thanks," she said coldly, and when he was gone she got out of the car and went limping back to Staley's house through the chilly darkness.

"You are going to take me home after all," she said to him. "We've all just been in an accident." And she broke down, trying to tell him about it, her nerves shaken and shattered.

But Lily was twice as firm as he was. She simply was not going to be alone with Staley. Drummond that night to "talk things over seriously," as he said.

She was not ready to talk things over with him. First of all, she wanted to think them over herself. If she married Staley, would all of her evenings be like this one? Either evenings that she spent alone with him, as she had spent the first part of it, or evenings spent drinking and talking rubbish with Sue and Jack Eastman or some other couple or couples?

"I'm going with Sue and Jack," she said again, positively. "If you drive me home you know we'll talk for two or three hours more—and I don't want to be tired. I was up early this morning and I want to go to bed."

She had risen at half past eight, but that was early for her these days, although it would have been disgracefully late down in the

UNITED AFTER THIRTY-FIVE YEARS

Francis U. Main and his daughter.

By IONE QUINBY
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Gazette

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 4—Thirty-five years ago, a three-year-old child was kidnapped from the home of her father, to whom she had been legally given.

The father never saw her again until a few days ago when he found her as the wife of a well-to-do Chicago real estate broker, with a grown daughter of her own.

Back in the early nineties, the father, Francis U. Main, then a farmer, living at Bartlesville, Okla., waved "good bye" to a chubby-faced girl of three—now Mrs. Chas. Rankin of Chicago—and set out for town with his horses and wagon.

"I went to Los Angeles and found my wife and child had lived there. I traced them through dozens of towns. A few days ago I ran across another acquaintance who told me my daughter was living in Chicago."

CHAPTER LII

She waited for Staley to say something more about the piston ring. But he did not. He just went on pouring out the champagne into the thin shallow glasses carefully, never spilling a drop.

If there is a better ring on the market than his, it won't be such a noveling success, will it?" she said slowly. "Especially if you put a lot of money into the other one."

Staley shrugged his shoulders under his perfectly fitting coat. His mouth lined the corners of his little blonde toothbrush mustache as he smiled to himself.

"Well, that's why I'm doing it," he answered. "I'm not an old-fashioned villain, Lily. I don't want to ruin your husband just because he is your husband—I probably never can put any money into the other company anyway. I just told you about it to see what you would say, more than for any other reason, I think. He laughed.

And that was the last Lily heard of the Scintilla piston ring for a long time.

She did not take any of the champagne when he passed it to her.

"I thought you were the girl who wanted to be gay and wild tonight," he said, looking at her in surprise. "And now you refuse my champagne."

There's nothing more gay and wild than champagne," giggled Sue, taking her. "What's the matter with you, Lily? Anybody who can't get champagne these days and doesn't take it is just plain crazy, it means to me."

Lily did not know herself, what made her so blue and depressed. After all, what difference did it make to her if Pat's marvelous piston ring wasn't so marvelous as he had said it was? How could it affect her if it did not sell—and if he went broke on it?

He was all through with her—just as she was through with him.

"Ten cents for your thoughts, Lily," Sue called out gaily, starting her from them. "You look as blue as indigo."

But no one could have called Sue blue at that moment. She was just starting to drink her second glass of the wine, and her cheeks were flushed and her eyes twinkled like winter stars.

This was a great little idea of yours, Staley," she declared, turning to him. "Let's make a night of it, after all. Let's load up with some flasks and go out to the new roadhouse called the Zulu Hut. You know, they don't give you any forks or knives with your hands. Come on, let's go!"

She had forgotten all about the suites that she had been planning to pack and to spirit out of the house. She was ready for fun and plenty of it—and the wilder it was the better she was going to like it, so she said, getting up to go.

But Jack refused to budge.

What could be sweeter than this? he asked. To sit here in Staley's big, warm, comfortable house, sunk deep in a cushioned arm chair, with drinks at his elbow, and the three best pals a man ever had right here with him? What could be sweeter? He wanted to know, and Sue couldn't tell him.

"Why, we're celebrating our big day in advance," he said to her, and for two hours Lily watched him celebrate it.

For two hours he never moved from the depths of the big Sleepy Hollow chair except when he leaned forward to take another glass of the Bourbon that he had begun to drink with ginger ale, or to light a cigarette.

"If he were anybody but Jack Eastman, I'd worry about him," Sue said when he finally swayed to his feet and announced that he was ready to go home at half past nine.

"But Jack always says that the more he has to drink the better he can drive his car—and that's the unholy fact."

"I'll go with you," Lily told her, getting up from her chair, too.

"No, I'll take you," Staley interupted, firmly.
